INCREASE POSTAL PAY, SAYS GALLIVAN

There was no finer type of public service anywhere in this country than in the postal service of New England, but the morale was rapidly weakening. The telegram follows: "Answering your telegram, may say to you that when the first commission on postal salaries visited Boston on September 12, 1918, I appeared at the first session of the Postal Commission and addressed the commission. There were present United States Senators Day of Louisiana and Moses of New Hampshire and Representatives Hall of Georgia, House of Kentucky, Stevenson of Minnesota and Madden of Illinois, a spokesman of the commission. "I then told the commission what I am glad to repeat in the American."

that there was no finer type of public service anywhere in this country than in the postal service of New England. I called attention to the fact that the morale of the men in the postal service was rapidly weakening because of dissatisfaction with working conditions, and more especially because these faithful public servants were not receiving a living wage. "Knowing intimately hundreds of letter carriers and postal clerks living in Boston I was able to advise the commission as to the conditions under which they lived and the hardships which they experienced in trying to raise their families. "The salary question seemed to be the paramount one, as it still is. To answer that question this government of ours should at once determine on what an American father and mother can raise an American family in an American way, and then add to that sufficient for competition, for their declining years or in case of illness in the family. NO MORE LOYAL BODY."

"As I said in my opening, there is no more loyal body of men or people in this country than the postoffice employees of New England. The failure to relieve present conditions and the intention by the present administration that they expect more and more in the way of performance from employees already overworked, has produced a state of mind bordering on rebellion. The workers seek no favors and want none. They ask only for a fair return on their labor with an opportunity of having under a state for the education of their children and a little that they may have to live on at all of our some time during our lives."

"As for better working conditions, I want to see them men relieved from working in cellars and basements and coal bins and other badly-lighted, unventilated and poorly-ventilated quarters. "These are some of the things I have tried to impress on the members of the Postal Commission. Individually and collectively, repeatedly I have urged for immediate action. "I earnestly may to the American that I pursue continuous efforts along these lines. In all sincerity I believe that unless a complete and immediate revision of salaries awards is made, the next few years will see the complete reorganization of the postal service. "Under present conditions what incentive is there for men to do their best? None whatever. The postal service is too near the heart of the American people and it is of too vital importance to American business to leave the safe, speedy, accurate dispatch, transportation and delivery of the important and valuable messages to untrained employees. "You have asked me how immediate results toward securing better wages and better working conditions can be obtained. My answer is by continued insistence from here and there, and I believe that the Postal Commission, which has had the privilege of being in for fifteen months report at once to the Congress, and if necessary, that Congress delay its purpose received the treatment they are entitled to. "The American campaign has met with an immediate response from the public and is becoming one of the most popular movements yet inaugurated. "Thousands of the petitions to Congress have been sent. PETITION TO CONGRESS

To the Congress of the United States:

I appeal to the members of Congress to use their influence in securing the passage of legislation which will provide a suitable, living wage for the employees of the postal service.

I ask that some action be taken to prevent the continued and increasing number of resignations of highly-trained, capable and efficient employees, who are forced to seek other lines of business, with a consequent impairment of the postal service.

I appeal to Congress for immediate action, on the part of two hundred and fifty thousand postal employees, in order to save the postal service from complete collapse.

The broadcast by postal employees, whose underpayment is resulting in the as-firmly impairment of the postal system. The public are receiving these petitions gladly and forwarding them to their Congressmen, with letters of praise and commendation of the campaign are coming into the American post office in large numbers. SYSTEM IS JEOPARDY. Apparently for the first time the people are beginning to realize that the entire postal system is in jeopardy because of the large numbers of employees forced to seek other lines of business in order to obtain satisfactory wages. Local employees of the post office maintain that the present national salary schedule is approximately $13 a week, is actually inadequate. SENATE PASSES $3 A DAY GOVERNMENT PAY BILL. Washington, May 26.—The Johnson-Solomon bill, providing a wage of at least $3 a day for adult employees in the postal service, has been passed by the Senate without opposition. President Wilson is expected to sign the measure within the next two weeks.

HUGE PROFIT ON DRESS GOODS

Half Price Women Pay Is

Tribute, According to

Economist Lauck

By International News Service. Washington, May 25.—The women of the country contribute about 50 per cent. profit on nearly all the dress goods they buy, W. J. Lauck, consulting economist of the national union declared today. "In the majority of dress goods of all kinds," said Lauck, "profits are absorbing approximately half the price paid by the consumer."

Here are the figures which Lauck gave on the various classes: Unbleached cotton—Retail price increased over 24 cents between 1912 and 1918, or ten times the increase of all labor costs.

Printed percale.—The increase in profit margin was five times the increase cost of labor, and the retail price advanced to 131.87 per cent over 1912.

Black denim.—Approximately half the price paid by the consumer went to the profit in 1918. The entire cost of producing this cloth was 75 cents a yard, while it retailed for $5.00.

The mill owners' profits increased 60 per cent. The retail price advanced to 131.87 per cent over 1912.

"In retailing these goods," Lauck stated, "the dealer usually adds 40 per cent. to the price at which he buys the goods. On fancy silks they add 100 per cent. or more."

Local employees of the post office maintain that the present national salary schedule is approximately $13 a week, is actually inadequate.

MORE TREES IF U. S. IS TO HAVE PAPER. Washington, May 24.—A review of the newspaper paper situation made public today by the Federal Trade Commission, showing increased production and decreased exports, indicates clearly that a national policy of reforestation must be adopted if the pulp wood industry is to live, as a statement from the American Forestry Association today.

IRISH CLUBS TO HONOR AIDE

Plan South End Reception to O'Connell, Friends of Irish Freedom Official

Daniel T. O'Connell, in charge of the National Bureau of Information of the Friends of Irish Freedom in Washington, D. C., will be tendered a reception by the thirty clubs of the Central Council of Irish Country Associations in Hibernia Hall, No. 1211 Washington street, South End, Sunday evening.

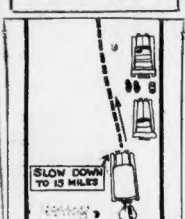

Present as guests will be Edward F. McWherry, Thomas H. Mahony, Captain John J. Murphy of South Boston and Thomas F. Phelan of Roxbury, as well as officers of different Irish societies in Greater Boston.

President John J. Foley, who will preside at the meeting, today announced that the object of the reception to Daniel O'Connell, who is a brother of former Congressman Joseph P. O'Connell, is to show the appreciation of the different Irish organizations of the work performed by him throughout the country in behalf of the Irish cause.

Action will be taken at the meeting on the Mason Bill, which, if reported favorably to the National House by the Committee on Foreign Relations, will insure recognition of the Irish Republic. It is proposed to pass a resolution urging speedy action on the measure.

Rhetorics of Malton, Malton, Everett, Winchester, Wakefield, and others will be heard at the reception and parade to be held on Sunday. James H. Dwyer, national president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Malden, announced that he will be chief marshal of the parade, headed by Maurice H. Ryan, secretary of the Irish Free State.

What Every Autoist Should Know

Every autoist should know that he should slow down to fifteen miles an hour when passing automobiles that are standing in the street headed in the same direction. Quite frequently motorists in failing to comply with this law. They step into the path of moving machines. This plan always is similar to that of the little boy who "didn't know the car was loaded." He didn't know anyone was going to step into his path from in front of the stationary car. The important thing is THIS: MOTORISTS SHOULD ALWAYS DRIVE AN "I'VE-SOMEONE-TO-STOP" CAR INTO HIS PATH.

fact: The Turkish Sultan who put the crescent in place of the cross on top of Saint Sophia was a man highly educated in mathematics and other sciences, speaking five languages, belonging in no superstition, and least of all, in Mohammed. Today's Sultan, an allied joke in Constantinople, does believe in Mohammed and doesn't know much about anything else. That's what's the matter with the crescent.

There's agitation in London among prosperous travelers from this country because the Lord Chamberlain has not yet announced the list of American women that Queen Mary will be pleased to receive at Court. As gently as possible it is intimated that some names of young and old women that want to be presented "require careful scrutiny."

No wonder, with twenty thousand new millionaires created by profiteering in this country since the war.

POLICE STRIKERS DONE FOREVER

Superintendent Crowley Says Men of New Force Stand Good Chance for Promotion

Members of the Boston police force today discussed with interest the statement of Superintendent Michael H. Crowley that no men of the old force who apply will be taken back. Superintendent Crowley told the new men at City Hall station that by faithful service they stand a good chance for promotion.

In addressing members of the Volunteer Police Association at Boston City Club, in the presence of Mayor Devine and others, Superintendent Crowley said he believed that radical labor agitators were responsible for the strike last Fall. "I have talked with many of the old men," said Superintendent Crowley, "and I have not yet found one who could give a satisfactory reason for striking."

Superintendent Crowley said he is not opposed to organized labor, but believe unionism has no place in the Police Department.

Other speakers included Mayor Devine and Police Inspector John J. Dwyer of New York.

The organization adopted the name "Volunteer Police Association of 1915," and elected these officers: President, Professor Edwin H. Hall; vice-presidents, Breton H. McCurdy, Robert H. Brayton, and Niles Chay-

MAIN RENT BILL IN FINAL STAGE

Measure Limiting Profits to 25
Per Cent. Passes Third
Reading in Senate

The anti-rent profiteering bill, making increases of more than 25 per cent. in rents presumably unjust, passed its third reading in the Senate. It was on today's calendar for enactment.

The bill providing for a six months' stay of sentence in eviction proceedings is in the hands of the Committee on Bills, and the question of its third reading will be acted upon as soon as it is released by this committee.

No opposition developed in the Senate to the 25 per cent. increase measure, and some is expected on the six months' stay of sentence measure. Indications are that all five of the anti-rent profiteering bills, brought about through the campaign conducted by this newspaper through the Boston American Tenants' League, will become laws within a few days.

These bills will provide local rent committees with plenty of means of curbing profiteering in dwelling property, and after they become law profiteering in rents should cease.

The efficacy of the bills now being acted upon will depend almost entirely upon the activity of the rent committees in the various cities and towns.

They profit, through the embargo domain act, a means for three long committees to bring to terms immediately any landlord who persists in acting unjustly, and who refuses to aid the committee in securing rents at a reasonable level.

MORSE INDICTMENT IS QUASHED IN U. S. COURT

New York, May 24.—Federal Judge A. L. Hand made an order quashing the indictment returned on May 19 against Charles W. Morse and others charging them with violating the shipping law by selling a steamer to a French citizen without obtaining permission from the government. The prosecution was alleged to have taken place during the war. The indictment was quashed.

ment was quashed at the request of the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation, when a review of the evidence indicated the improbability of a conviction.

Tires Changed While Car Owners Shop

The Goodrich Tire Service Company of No. 48 Broadway has adopted a novel scheme, which certainly ought to appeal to shoppers and chauffeurs. The company's service station is so centrally located that owners can leave their cars when going to the mall and have tires changed or repaired while they are either shopping or attending a show.

"While we are not establishing a checking station," said "Doc" Pinkelstein, one of the partners, "it is possible for anyone needing tires or our service to leave a car and know that it is in safe keeping."

"Although we have only been established at our present location about two months, both 'Doc' Pinkelstein, my partner, and myself, are greatly pleased with the way business has been going."

PREDICTS BOOM IN TRUCK SALES

Despite Heavy Orders Makes Plan Big Advertising Drive, Says Wilcox

By GEORGE D. WILCOX, Director of Sales and Advertising, Commercial Motor Car Company, Detroit, Mich.

Without any specific attention being paid to it being nothing else than an offshoot of the passenger car industry that for a time was, and still is, trailing in the passenger car industry, forecasts for 1920 will see many changes for the better in the fast growing motorized transportation industry—motor trucks.

Despite the fact that all manufacturers of good selling trucks are in arrears in making delivery of their product, there is nothing to indicate that this condition will not continue for a number of years to come.

The high cost of living is being paid to the passenger car industry for its wages have made motor car owners of persons who never before expected to own a motor car. The natural demand for motor trucks, the cost of a business depression would only increase truck sales and the ever so many other reasons why the motor truck industry now in its infancy has properly ahead of it, makes this industry a factor that must be reckoned with in more ways than one.

The truck manufacturer has no one who touched the advertising stride that the passenger car manufacturer has in the same year old period continued, but truck manufacturers are expected to have on their books at the factory, ready after advertising season.

Pennsylvania VACUUM CUP CORD TIRES

Economy Prices

—prevail on Vacuum Cup Tubes and "Ton Tested" Tubes, as proved by a comparison of these standardized net prices with those asked for ordinary makes.

The present moderate schedule is made possible by greatly increased production by a thoroughly competent organization, an up-to-the-minute factory using every improvement and labor saving device, and a zone selling system which markets with approximately the same selling facilities, an ever-increasing production.

These prices are standardized net, uniform throughout the United States.

Pay no more—do not expect Pennsylvania prices for less.

The First Store-Wide Clearance Since Last January

White's High Sale—Wednesday and Thursday

We have held only two month-end sales this year, and they included only a few departments. Now we come to the turning of the season. From Winter and rain we turn hopefully to Summer and sunshine. May is the month therefore of big accumulations. Also the month of wonderful bargains in this sale. Practically every department in the store has taken reductions on literally thousands of pieces of merchandise.

Remnants, Odd Lots, Discontinued Styles, Shopworn or Slightly Damaged Merchandise

In some departments where there were not enough goods to mark down for this big sale we have gone into the market and secured some wonderful lots at big price concessions.

Note:—As the last day of the month comes on a holiday (Memorial Day observed on Monday) we have arranged to have the sale a few days in advance. This will enable many to secure things needed for the Holiday at month-end sale prices.

Every Sale Final—No Goods Credited or Exchanged—No Goods Sent C. O. D. MAIL ORDERS—We prefer not to fill Mail Orders on merchandise which is slightly soiled or in any way not first quality. Otherwise Mail Orders will be filled unless lots are sold out.

FRIEDMAN BOUT A DRAW, BUT MARTIN IS GIVEN THE AWARD

LUBBOCK MORE THAN HELD END

Fans Favored Local Bantam in Spite of Verdict by the Referee

By JACK CONWAY

That a draw verdict should have been rendered by Referee Power at the conclusion of the Terry Martin-Friedman battle was the opinion of the majority of fans who witnessed that hectic make at the Mechanics building show of the Army A. L. and today discussion of the bout is the leading topic of conversation in local boxing circles.

It is true that the New England bantam champion had the better of the argument in the earlier rounds of the bout but Friedman was an top from that point onward, and throughout the battle landed the clearest blows.

Much of Martin's early advantage came in kidney punches which under the proper interpretation of the rules do not count.

At the end of the sixth frame it looked though Martin was going to win handily. From that point on, however, Friedman had the better of the battling. His punches were straight and clean. He was as good as scoring to the body as he was in delivering punishment to the head.

At all times he adhered to the rules of the game which made a big hit with the fans.

Martin's aggressiveness and willingness to fight even when he was down, but that was all he should have received.

Martin started fighting at a terrific rate at the end of the bout in the first frame. He scored with solid blows to the body. He also landed the kidney punch. It was Martin's round.

The Providence bantamweight continued his fine work in the second frame. He was on top of his opponent at all times and had a decided margin on his rival where festivities ended.

It was a different story in the third round. Friedman boxed cleverly and managed to keep out of the way of most of Martin's wild swings. He scored himself with straight punches to the head and sharp right-hand uppercuts in the body. Friedman also gave Martin a merry argument in the fourth frame, which was fifty-fifty.

Martin came back strong in the fifth and sixth rounds. He did not lose his punches as much as he had been doing. The result was that he reached his opponent often.

Tide of Battle Shifts in Seventh

The tide of battle shifted in the seventh round. Boxing like a master of the Queensberry art, Friedman hooked and jabbed in opposition. Martin was wild and fanned the air repeatedly.

crowded with his blows. It was Friedman's round.

The eighth session also saw the out in front. He was hitting straight and true to the mark. Martin's blows were outside. Once more Friedman grabbed the blue-ribbon. There was plenty of lively argument in the ninth frame, and Friedman took the honors by a shift. The tenth round saw Martin out in front. The last two sessions were crowded with action and Friedman had the best of the going.

Friedman lost the decision, but he did not lose any of his reputation.

Young Chakas of Manchester, N. H., named Jack O'Leary, Cambridge tetterworth, in the semi-final.

The fight between K. O. Charley Brennan of Charlestown and Newington Regan of Brockton was declared a draw by Referee Flaherty.

Most of the fans were of the opinion that Friedman won.

East Boston High has an excellent chance of duplicating its victory of last season in the District High Schools annual track meet. In the field events, which were held on Monday, the Noodle Island team piled up a 21-point lead over their nearest opponent. The dashes and runs of the third annual meet take place tomorrow at the Tech Field, Cambridge.

Seven clubs are represented in the meet. East Boston, South Boston, West Roxbury, Hyde Park, Brighton, Charlestown and the Boston Trade School.

The nearest rivals to East Boston are Hyde Park and West Roxbury. Both these schools, together with South Boston, should gather a great many points in the running events and make the meeting more even and interesting.

Ralph Colson of East Boston, the winner and record holder of the 100-yard dash for this meet, will be the favorite in this event. The 100-yard run will have Gene Hussey of Hyde Park to contend with.

Ralph Colson of East Boston, the only double first place winner in the senior division last year, should duplicate his performance again. Gene Hussey of Hyde Park is also a logical double-point winner.

Colson has already won the long-jump and 100-yard dash and will undoubtedly win the 100-yard run. He was the logical winner of the 100-yard run.

The Harvard Intercollegiate meet will hold the center of the country for the first time. It has been planned and has most of the athletes from the seven schools. The meet will take place at the Harvard Stadium Saturday afternoon.

Kid McCoy Enjoys New Boxing Law

New York, May 26.—Norman J. Selby, better known as Kid McCoy, one-time pugilist, was in court on a charge of disorderly conduct. He was arrested after turning a few chairs, tables and waltzes upside down in a Teederman cabaret.

"I was celebrating the signing of the Walker boxing bill," he explained to the court. The complaint was disposed of by a fine and sentence was suspended.

HELEN LOCKE TO HEAD RADCLIFFE HOCKEY

U. S. TENNIS STARS READY FOR TRIP ABROAD

New York, May 26.—William M. Johnston, William Tilden, 24, and M. Norris Williams, three members of the American Davis Cup team, are busy today in preparation for their departure for England June 4.

The players planned to include in their practice on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills today wearing the modified male outfit which will be worn in the English tour.

PLESTINA AND FREBURG MEET ON MAT TONIGHT

Martin Plestina and John Freburg are ready for their catch-as-catch-can match to the finish at the Seaside Temple tonight. Both have been in town since Monday and working out daily in a local gym and declare themselves to be fit for the fray.

NEW SHAMROCK IS LAUNCHED

Lipton's Cup Challenger Is Called Real Greyhound by Experts.

New York, May 26.—The Shamrock IV, Mr. Thomas Lipton's challenger for the America's Cup, will be launched at noon today at Robert Jacob's shipyard, City Island.

Since the arrival in this country of Charles H. Nicholson, her designer, a week ago, the Lipton ship has been getting final touches preparatory to her launching today, and Nicholson is highly satisfied with the looks of the strangely constructed boat.

The Shamrock will be fitted with a wooden mast, which will be set in place after she is launched. Designers Nicholson says the challenger's wooden mast is a much stronger type than the one which broke at the Lipton's, crossed the finish line ahead of the "Plover" at New Haven.

In case the Shamrock's should suffer a similar accident, however, experts have been provided.

The twenty-three-meter Shamrock, which is to be the trial horse for Shamrock IV, is making her way to this country by easy stages. She first sailed from Ireland to Azores and then to Bermuda.

She is expected to arrive here about June 4, and will be immediately fitted up for the tacking up trial against the challenger.

The two Shamrocks will do their tacking up over the Sandy Hill course where the classic international race will be sailed in July.

Mr. Thomas Lipton will arrive in this country about the middle of June. He is coming with a feeling of confidence that his latest challenger will be successful and these also have seen the Shamrock IV, are willing to concede that she is a ship with all the earmarks of a true ocean steamer and one that can be expected to give either "Rattlesnake" or "Cantile" the greatest kind of racing.

Under the operation of commercial treaties between the United States and other countries our merchant fleet almost vanished from the seas.

With our hands tied by these agreements, we have been powerless to take effective steps for the maintenance of our merchant marine.

These treaty provisions, which have operated to throttle American shipping, are subject to termination.

The Senate Shipping Bill expresses the opinion that they should be modified and directs action to this end.

When this is done we shall be in a position to enable American ships to hold their own in competition for our fair share of the commerce of the world.

This is a for-America policy that deserves the support of all good Americans.

End the conditions that throttle our shipping

MORE than nine million tons of ships built in American shipyards fly the American flag on the high seas—

We have put a great merchant marine on the seas. But it cannot be kept there under present conditions.

It cannot make America independent of foreign shipping in getting American goods to the markets of the world.

It cannot meet in successful competition the ships of other countries which are built more cheaply; operated more cheaply.

It cannot cope with trade fleets around which other Governments have thrown the protecting arm of preferential treatment and legislation.

But these conditions can be changed.

Under the operation of commercial treaties between the United States and other countries our merchant fleet almost vanished from the seas.

With our hands tied by these agreements, we have been powerless to take effective steps for the maintenance of our merchant marine.

These treaty provisions, which have operated to throttle American shipping, are subject to termination.

THE YOUNG DIANA

Story of Tense Mystery in Which Heroine Holds Key to Youth

By Marie Cozelli

HEN she took her new chapter, she gave it a little suggestive squint, by way of assuring her that it was as it should be—and with another bewildering smile, and a satisfied "de conne" she passed on, with her banker (who had become a little stiff and standoffish at the approach of Captain Beresford), his Beresford, who also disappeared.
 Cleve tugged wearily at his "moustache."
 "Dear relative, is she?" Then she knew! Or—perhaps not! She was young—not more than eighteen at most. And the old Diana must be quite forty-five! Hang it all!—this might be her daughter! But old Diana never married just this old man! Faithful to a "memory!" He laughed. By Jove! I remember now, she got drowned last year—old Diana, did—drowned somewhere in Livorno. I read about it in the papers and thought what a jolly good thing! Poor old Diana! And this little beauty is "really" it! "Well—well—well—well!"
 But when tomorrow came, it brought him no elucidation of the mystery. Diana had left the hotel. The manageress explained that through Mrs. Beresford she had heard of a very charming furnished flat which she thought would suit her, and had gone to make the final arrangements.
 "She left this note for you," said the manageress, handing Cleve a card. "She remembered that I had asked you to call on her this afternoon."
 He took the letter with a sudden quail of "nerves." It was simple enough.
 "Dear Captain (Cleve) (it ran):
 "So sorry to miss you, but I am so busy and so full of things to do for the next few days, putting things in order. After that will come and see me at the above address!"
 "You're kidding!"
 "That was all—but while reading it, Captain the manageress had swung round and round as if she were revolving in a wheel. For the letter had seemed to come from a young Diana, the handwriting—the painfully familiar handwriting—was that of the "old" Diana!

CHAPTER XXIV
GENTLES takes a century or more to become recognized—but beauty illumines the mortal even as swiftly as a flashlight. Brief it may be, but none the less brilliant and enduring; and men who are for the most part themselves unattentive and care not to nothing for intellectualism, go down like beaten reeds under the spell of physical loveliness, when it is united to a dominating command of charm. Consciousness of charm is a powerful magnet. A woman may be beautiful, but if she is of a nervous or retiring disposition and she awkwardly in the background twiddling her thumbs she is never a success. She must know her own power, and, knowing it, must exercise it.
 "Old" Diana May had failed to learn this lesson in the days of her childhood—she had believed, with quite a touching filial faith, in the

Lived Quiet Life
 Once established in her flat with her chaplain, Mrs. Beresford, she lived the most carefully removed life from all the bustle that surged and seethed round her. The few appearances she made at opera, theatre, restaurant and the like were sufficient to lift her into the sphere of the recognized and triumphant "beauty" of the day. Corns and warts seemed all the "raked" portraits of the half-nude, serene of the stage and music-hall in the pictorial press. With the rare glances of the ethereal, almost divine loveliness, she was never permitted to be copied by any painter or photographer.
 Once only did an eager cameraman press the button of his "snap-shot" machine face to face with Diana as she came out of her room. She smiled kindly as she passed him and he knew that she was in heaven. But when he came to develop his negative it was "fogged," as though it had had the light in front of it instead of behind it, as photographically demands. This accident was a complete mystification, as he had been more than usually careful to take up his camera in the usual manner. Other photographers were just as unfortunate and none were able to obtain so much as a faint impression of the fair features which had so often made the holder who gazed upon them. Artistic men, even the most renowned, are usually disappointed—she is the unapproachable, the cold, yet enchanting "maiden goddess moulded from a dream" would not "set" to any one of them—would not have anything to do with them at all in fact—and fled from them as though she was a Daphne pursued by many a Apollo.
 A very short time sufficed to surround her with a crowd of admirers and would-be lovers, chief and most persistent among them being Captain the Honorable Beresford. Cleve, and that antique Apollo, her father, James Purdine May. This worthy James had all his life been in the habit of forming opinions which were diametrically opposed to the opinions of everyone else—and pursuing this course always to his own satisfaction. He had come to the conclusion that this "old" Diana May who declared herself to be his daughter, was an artificial demi-monde and adventures with "creak" he had frequently heard of people who imagined themselves to be the reincarnated embodiment of the dead. "Why, God bless my soul, I should think so!" he said to a man at the club, who rallied him about his openly expressed admiration for the "new beauty" who bore the same name as that of his "drowned" daughter—"I met a woman once who told me she was the reincarnation of Cleopatra! Now this girl, just because she happens to have my name, strikes to her idea, that she is my Diana!"

When Hearts Are Trumps

By Virginia Terhune Van

CHAPTER XV

WHILE the conversation between her aunt and uncle was going on, Barbara Paine sat in her room and began a letter to Robert. She had no intention of meeting her uncle until she had received a letter from him—but it was a relief to her feelings to put upon paper some of the thoughts that filled her mind.
 As she told him that a beautiful drive she had had this afternoon—how the whole world looked different to her because she was thinking of him and of his love. Then she thrust the sheet of paper into the drawer of her desk. It was late that afternoon when she had written the letter, and she would have much to say to him.

The moon was high in the heavens. The smell of the honeysuckle covering the pillars of the veranda below her was borne to her nostrils. Drooping on her knees by the window, she drew in long breaths of the fresh night air.
 "How many four hours ago she and Robert had looked at this same moonlight and smiled the same happy smile, had listened to the song of the nightingale."
 Gradually her body relaxed, her head sank upon her folded arms and she fell asleep.

Her Aunt Appears

A light touch on her shoulder aroused her. She raised her head and looked down at her.
 "Why—why?" she murmured, gazing at her aunt. "I must have been asleep!" It was Mrs. Paine, and she was smiling.
 "Then she stopped, aware that Miss Cynthia was regarding her disapprovingly."
 "Barbara, you should not go to sleep on the floor like this. If you are so tired from your late hours last night, you should go to bed." Mrs. Paine spoke in a stern, but not unkind, voice.
 "I am not tired, aunt," Barbara answered, smiling up at her.
 "Then she stopped, aware that Miss Cynthia was regarding her disapprovingly."
 "Barbara, you should not go to sleep on the floor like this. If you are so tired from your late hours last night, you should go to bed." Mrs. Paine spoke in a stern, but not unkind, voice.

The Sport Blouse

By Rita Stuyvesant

WHEN one combines a smart sport blouse with one of those delightful summer sport skirts, she will have a most attractive costume. And if she has several pretty blouses to wear with each skirt, she will have a very economical wardrobe that will yet be quite stunning. Georgette, crepe de chine, tricotelle, wool jersey, taffeta and soft satin all continue liveliness to the summer sport blouse.
 A blouse that flatters the ultra-modern is an admitting world is made from orange-colored crepe de chine and chooses black wool crepe for its decoration. It is a hip-length tunic model with elbow kimono sleeves and a square neck.
 Then there is an over-panel that covers the front and extends into each one ending at the back. The embroidery is scattered gracefully across the front trailing down the sides and there. With a simple skirt of white muslin, and a large sport hat of soft orange straw, what more could a clamorous brunette desire for summer days.
 Blouses for spring and summer mean many ways to appear unusual and lovely, but there is one little blouse of smart green tricotelle that apparently knows all the ways, so interesting in detail, and so graceful in line. It is favored for sports and for many a rare occasion, and chooses tulle and white brushed wool for decoration.
 Of course, it is kimono style with the fashionably short skirted three times at the ends. Deep cuffs.

Precept and Practice

A pedlar was pressing his wares on the attention of a farmer's wife and her daughter, but although they seemed curious to see everything that he had to offer, he was an article "at half the price you'd pay in a good shop," he asked anxiously. "Really?" the farmer's wife in the virtue of thrift? "I'm doing my best to practice it!" the farmer's wife replied.

JULIAN

VARIATION—Julius, Julliano, RACIAL-ORIGIN—Ancient Roman.

SOURCE—A clan name.

This system, of course, was submerged when the Roman Empire went down under the successive waves of barbarians from the northwest, who settled in the lands they conquered and finally built up the modern civilization. Naturally these barbarians did not bother with family names. It was enough for a man to have one name and indicate who his father was.

But the old Roman family names survived in a fashion, and, when the new civilization assumed constructive form, and people began to adopt family names, many of them came to light again. Julian is one of these names. It is no less than the family name of Julius Caesar.

The old Roman system of names was threefold. A citizen had three names, his personal, given name, his family name and his tribal name. Of course, the tribal system of the Romans had disappeared very early, long before Rome became the center of world conquest, but the custom of passing the tribal or "gent" name down from father to son survived.

Caesar's full name was Gaius Julius Caesar. His given name was Gaius. His family name was Julius. The name of his "gent" was Caesar.

There were many other families in the Caesar "gent." Likewise there were other Julius families in other tribal classifications. But the threefold system made identification of virtually every Roman citizen absolutely accurate.

MEASURES THAT WOULD CURE MOST OF THE TROUBLES AND TENDENCIES WHICH DISTRESS AND ALARM US TODAY

- (1) To nominate for the Presidency by direct nomination and to elect by popular vote.
- (2) To elect the Cabinet officers and make them responsible to Congress.
- (3) To deprive the President of the power of patronage; to put all public offices as nearly as possible

- sible under Civil Service, and have appointments made by a committee of Congress.
- (4) To elect Federal Judges, including the Supreme Court Justices, by popular vote.
- (5) To apply the Initiative, the Referendum and the Recall to national matters.

Kill the Plan for Direct Tax on Retail Sales

Frank W. Merriok, representing the United Improvement Association, before the Committee on Sources of Revenue, has again brought up for consideration the direct tax on retail sales in Boston. This proposition should be killed once for all. The proposition of a very small tax on all sales throughout the nation as a substitute for all other taxes on business of every sort might be worth extensive consideration, but a tax on retail sales in the city of Boston is ridiculous and would cause tremendous damage to business interests and consequently to the people.

Auto Headlight Law Should Be Enforced

There is in this State a law against the use of glaring headlights on automobiles. We might have a better law, but that is neither here nor there. The present law would do it if it were enforced, but it is not being enforced.

The Boston American has been unable to find out definitely why the authorities responsible for the enforcement of the law are not enforcing it.

Many more automobiles are now licensed in this State than ever before, and by mid-Summer it is calculated there will be on the roads of this State nearly twice as many automobiles as ever before.

Night driving is dangerous enough at best, but with the absolute failure of the authorities to enforce the law regarding glaring headlights, night driving in Massachusetts is about the most dangerous thing a person can do.

Exactly why a motorist should knowingly use headlights which glare and dazzle and make night driving hideous is beyond the possibility of any decent man's finding out. The fact remains that many of them do.

The authorities of this State could end this nuisance in forty-eight hours by making wholesale arrests and getting convictions in every case with the maximum penalty.

To make such arrests all the responsible officers would have to do would be to stand on any well used street or avenue and pick the offending drivers up as they come along.

Every decent automobile owner and every decent manufacturer and dealer of automobiles will applaud such action and will back it up to the limit.

Swiss Vote on League Shows How Real Democracy Works

The people of the little Swiss republic have voted 400,000 in favor to 300,000 against entering the League of Nations. This ends a long and bitter controversy in the republic of Switzerland concerning the wisdom of entering this alliance.

When President Wilson first went to Europe, advocating the League of Nations, there probably was no man or woman in the whole twenty-two Swiss States who did not favor the proposal and the most enthusiastic of all its Swiss advocates were the very elements which voted against it the other day.

After the disillusionment of the progressive element of Europe concerning President Wilson's capacity or faithful intentions to carry out his word pictures of ideals; after the publication of the treaty and the for-... the proposed league, with all its imperialistic trappings; after... reveals... of the undercurrent spirit of imperialism which animated the dominant nations creating the league and disclosed the fact that the league was nothing but a cover for the imperialistic designs of those victorious nations and only intended to carry out their dirty work and to take their leavings, there was a great revulsion of feeling all over the world, but especially in Europe, concerning the league. There also was a great shifting of lines.

The reactionary elements, which were cold toward the league, became its advocates, and liberal elements, which were for the league when they had faith in Mr. Wilson, became cold toward it, and those few who took it did so without enthusiasm and as a narrow choice of evils.

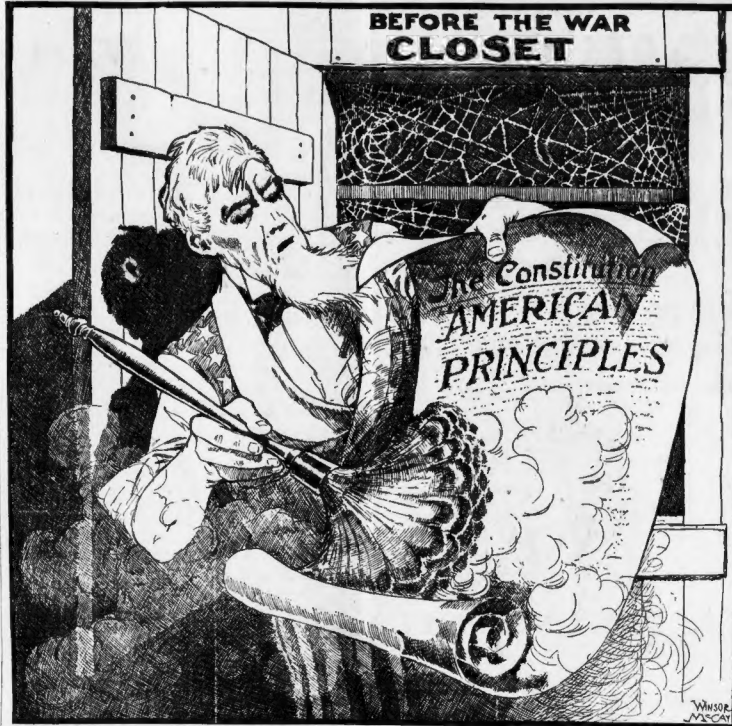

In Switzerland the league had the advantage of an overwhelming sentiment for it in the beginning. Those who changed their opinions never were able quite to overcome the handicap which the early popularity of the league gave it; but the immense vote against it, under the circumstances, showed how great was the disillusionment.

There is, however, in this Swiss vote, a reminder to the American people of the long distance we have yet to go before we can call ourselves really a democratic nation. Here is this little republic of the mountains, surrounded for centuries by the most reactionary and tyrannical monarchies and autocracies, and still surrounded by imperialistic nations, giving only lip service to democracy, which has acquired so complete a control of its own government that great questions of foreign policy are decided by a direct vote of the people themselves, after a huge campaign of discussion and dissemination of information.

That is the way the question of the League of Nations should be decided by America. That is the way that the question of war and peace should be decided in America. That is the way the question of alliances with foreign nations should be decided by America, and until our American people are able to decide these great questions themselves, we shall not be a thoroughgoing democracy.

More Truth Than Poetry

Propriety Suffers a Set-Back

By S. E. KISER

MRS. PRIM was very proper, it is only just to say: She was always shocked at women who would dare to ride astride;

She would hardly show her ankles, even on a sloppy day; Once she saw a woman smoking, and they say she nearly died.

She would never think of speaking to a man at any time If no proper introduction had afforded her the right; She believed that baring backbones to the waist-line was a crime.

She took off her clothes in darkness when she went to bed at night.

SHE was always very proper in her manner and her dress; It shocked her to hear people speak about the naked truth; Her legs were "limbs," and children filled her bosom with distress.

They were so very candid and immodest and uncouth. When she had to let the doctor see her tongue she nearly swooned;

There were always things that shocked her everywhere she ever went; Because of what composed the strings whereby the thing was tuned.

She thought the violin was not a proper instrument. SHE hinted that if angels wore no clothing in the skies She hoped that she might never have to walk a golden street;

She preferred some lonely planet, where, with plenty of supplies, She might sit in robes that hid her, from her shoulders to her feet;

But one night a conflagration started in the flat next door, And consenting to relinquish her prim notions for a while, She was carried down a ladder from about the seventh floor, Wearing little in addition to a mighty thankful smile.

By K. C. B.

DEAR K. C. B.—On May 2, 1920, there died in Rutherford, N. J., in his eighty-sixth year, Mr. Philip Schlusser. In all probability Mr. Schlusser was the oldest baseball fan in New York and could recall all the earlier plays of his or seventy years ago. He maintained his interest in the game to the last living attended games on April 29 and 30 of this year.

In recent years, because of business reverses, he was obliged to give up many pleasures, and in his old age his church and baseball were his only recreation.

One hot afternoon, four years ago, he had just taken his seat in the bleachers in the hot sun, when one of the men in uniform on the field looked over and saw him. It was during the practice period and the man walked over to where the old man sat and said:

"This is no place for an old man like you. You're too frail to sit in his boiling sun. Come along with me."

And the old man went, and McGraw took him—for it was John McGraw himself—up into the grandstand, and from that time henceforth until his death whenever he attended the Polo Grounds—which was very frequent—was the guest of John McGraw.

Think Providence must have approved of McGraw's kindly act because the Giants let the league that year and the next.

C. B. BUCHER

AND JUST the other day, I READ in the paper, THAT THIS same McGraw, HAD BEEN suspended, FOR A couple of days, FROM THE baseball grounds, FOR FIGHTING with umpires, AND I'VE seen him myself, WHEN IT seemed to me, THAT ONE of these, COULD NEVER stop, TO FIND a place, IN THE cooling shade, FOR A wild man, AND IT seems again, THAT YOU never can tell, FROM THE look of the house, HOW MUCH of warmth, AND KINDNESS, THERE MAY be found, INSIDE THE house.

AND I'VE seen, THAT WHEN this old man, GOES NOAMING around, IN THE GYM Beyond, THAT MORE than likely, TO OTHER fans, HE'LL HAPPEN to meet,

HE'LL TELL the tale, OF THE short stout man, IN the uniform, ON THE practice field, AND IN due time, IT WILL reach the ears, OF ST. Peter himself, AND HE'LL mark it down, IN HIS pet big book, ON THE credit side, OF THE page he keeps, FOR JOHN McGraw, AND FOR JOHN McGraw, IN THE after years, HE'LL PROBABLY find, THEY'VE SAVED him a place, WHEREVER IT IS, THAT THE fans hang out, WHEN THEY go from here.

CONTRAST IN THOUGHTS OF TWO MEN

By Winifred Black

OUT in Colorado there's a hale, hearty old man who has just built a perfectly wonderful tombstone—for himself.

He's bought his grave and had the tree planted where the head of the grave is going to be. His monument is all carved and ready, with a nice, broad space for the date of his death—and the man is perfectly delighted with his grave, with the tree at the head of it, with his monument and the inscription on it—and with himself.

"When I die," says the old man, "I know everything will be all right—and that's such a blessing!" This man is seventy-eight years old—strong and hale, and hearty.

In Manchester, N. H., lives a man ninety-four years old. This man's name is Parsons, and he is a doctor; he has a big practice, goes on his rounds every morning and never misses a patient.

During the "flu" epidemic he was the busiest man in Manchester, and never does a sunny, pleasant day go by without a horseback ride for Dr. Parsons.

Ask him when he's going to retire? Not if you value your peace of mind!

You'll get a piece of his if you do.

He's busy, happy, interested in everybody and everything—except his grave and what kind of monument he's going to have.

Which man would you rather be?

"I know everything will be all right when I die," says the old man who has built himself a monument. Over and over he says it—wonder if he never thinks how much more fun it would be to be sure that everything is all right while he's alive.

What a fuss we do make about death, anyway? What is it but the closing of one door and the opening of another? What disposition are we going to take with us into the world behind that other door but the one we have cultivated so carefully all the time we were here?

To the Editor

Make Naturalization Easier Editor Boston American:

By a diligent study of conditions I find that the Americanization work could be greatly increased if the naturalization examiner would allow an authorized clerk, preferably a person of foreign birth, one who is well liked by the foreigners and who has a broad influence upon them, to issue declarations of intentions at a time and place most convenient for the people; while the procedure in obtaining second papers, full citizenship, could be left to more competent officers, the judges of the Superior Court.

I believe, would in the first place encourage the foreigners to learn English and to take more responsibility of the conditions surrounding them, and the accommodation offered them would make them feel that we mean what we say.

Often very few of us know where to take these foreigners and difficulties in applying for citizenship by unworkable difficulties.

What inducement is there to apply for first papers when the naturalization court is far away and there is no one who would sacrifice a day's wages to take the trip as a witness and to show him where the court is? While if the clerk were his own town at least once in three months, the alien could file at his convenience.

MORE ABOUT A ROCKET TO THE MOON

By Garrett P. Serviss

"I see that Professor Goddard intends to try his moon-rocket, persisting in the belief that it will continue to go, pushed by explosions after it gets above the atmosphere. But this is contrary to the principles of physics! How can it be pushed where there is nothing to push against? Isn't there a fallacy here?"

YES, there is a fallacy, but it is not Professor Goddard's. The force of the cartridges, successively exploded along the axis of his rocket, would need no air to kick against. The case is not the same as that of a propeller, whose blades obtain their propulsive power by reaction against the air or water.

When a gun is fired it kicks backward, while the projectile shoots forward, and the relative velocities of the gun moving backward and of the projectile going in the opposite direction are inversely proportional to the masses, or weights, of the gun and projectile. If the gun were fired in a vacuum it would act just the same. It is the mass-reaction of the gun concentrated in the line of fire that drives the projectile.

A General Force If the powder were simply suspended in the open air and exploded from a central point its force would be exerted in all directions radially from the point of explosion, instead of being concentrated along a particular line. Remove the air, and the explosion would occur in the same manner, the radial impulses reacting against one another at the center, somewhat as two equally strong men, placed back against the wall, push outward, in opposite directions, with their full muscular force without themselves falling backward. But, when the force of the explosion is permitted to expend itself equally all around, without concentration, of course the effect in any one direction is relatively slight.

In the case of Professor Goddard's rocket, the explosions react against the rocket along the line of its advance, or in the direction of its nose. As a gun is driven backward, so the rocket is driven forward. Without knowing the details of the special mechanism that he employs, it is easy to see that if the series of explosions can be kept up long enough Professor Goddard's rocket might be driven to the moon, the absence of resistance outside the limits of the earth's atmosphere being an advantage for the rocket, similar to that which the wind-tunnel offers the model of an airplane.

By a diligent study of conditions I find that the Americanization work could be greatly increased if the naturalization examiner would allow an authorized clerk, preferably a person of foreign birth, one who is well liked by the foreigners and who has a broad influence upon them, to issue declarations of intentions at a time and place most convenient for the people; while the procedure in obtaining second papers, full citizenship, could be left to more competent officers, the judges of the Superior Court.
